

Messy Time

By Elizabeth Verdick

Illustrated by Marieka Heinlen

It's messy time—
the best time!

Hello, dough!

Squash

Squish

Squeeze

Messy Time Tips for Parents & Caregivers

-  Make messes every day. Toddlers build their gross- and fine-motor skills through play, touch, and—yes—making a big mess. Think back to some of your happiest childhood moments: were puddles, mud, or sand involved? Or paint, markers, and paste? Messy time is growing time. Have get-messy clothes at the ready, so you and the kids can jump into the fun together.
-  Provide sensory-rich experiences. Young children learn through their senses. Outdoor play allows children to feel the sun on their skin, smell the air, hear birdsong, taste the rain, see flowers blooming, and interact with the natural world. Does your child get enough outdoor time each day, even during sloppy weather? Mud play (mud art, pies, and sculptures) is a sensory feast. It boosts creativity—and immunity. Indoors, set up a table with art supplies; create a music corner; make room for toddlers to roll, tumble, and bounce. Welcome children into the kitchen too. They'll love mixing, pouring, baking, and even washing dishes with you.
-  Have simple recipes on hand. Look online to find recipes for homemade play dough and bubble solution. Keep the ingredients handy so you can whip up a batch whenever the mood strikes. Find a child-friendly cookbook or website so you and your toddler can work together in the kitchen. These activities will be messier with your toddler helping, but you'll get some together-time while having fun.
-  Focus on process, not product. The goal isn't to make the “prettiest” picture or “perfectly” frosted cookies. Let toddlers simply enjoy feeling wet paint on their fingers or squeezing blobs of frosting onto baked goods. The greatest joy is in the making. Use phrases like, “You’re working hard” or “I like the way you’re having fun,” so children don’t get set on making something “the best.” If mistakes or messes happen, reassure toddlers that block towers fall, papers rip, and sandcastles wash into the sea. Sometimes smashing the sand or mud is as fun as building with it.

-  Go with the flow. Children enter the “flow state” during free play. They move from toy to toy, activity to activity, leaving a trail of objects behind them. Allow this free-for-all approach during messy time so children enjoy the magic of creating. Resist picking up after toddlers every step of the way—instead, watch the drama unfold and join in. Outdoors, encourage children to run barefoot in the grass, dig in the dirt, and get wet (with your supervision). To ease transitions from in to out and back again, have handy outdoor clothes and shoes that are easy-on and easy-off.
-  Finish with clean-up. Young children learn from seeing the process of tidy to messy to tidy again. Involve them in clean-up by teaching how to put away toys, wipe off the table, wash in the tub, or whatever is needed to neaten up. Show them how you do the job with a smile, or sing songs to make cleaning more fun.

Text copyright © 2022 by Elizabeth Verdick.
Illustrations copyright © 2022 by Marieka Heinlen. All rights reserved.

Some fabrics used with permission of Denyse Schmidt Designs, LLC, dsquilts.com, and Amy Butler for Rowan Fabrics, amybutlerdesign.com.

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Names: Verdick, Elizabeth, author. | Heinlen, Marieka, illustrator.

Title: Messy time / by Elizabeth Verdick ; illustrated by Marieka Heinlen.

Description: Minneapolis, MN : Free Spirit Publishing Inc., [2022] | Series: Toddler tools | Audience: Ages 1–4

Identifiers: LCCN 2021000547 (print) | LCCN 2021000548 (ebook) | ISBN 9781631986079 (board) |

ISBN 9781631986086 (pdf)

Subjects: LCSH: Play—Juvenile literature. | Parent and child—Juvenile literature. | Child development—Juvenile literature. | Games—Juvenile literature.

Classification: LCC HQ782 .V47 2022 (print) | LCC HQ782 (ebook) | DDC 306.874—dc23

LC record available at <https://lcn.loc.gov/2021000547>

LC ebook record available at <https://lcn.loc.gov/2021000548>

10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1

Printed in China

R18861121

free spirit PUBLISHING®

6325 Sandburg Road, Suite 100

Minneapolis, MN 55427-3674

612-338-2068

freespirit.com