Introduction

The WannaCry ransomware malware brought increased focus on the Server Message Block (SMB) protocol. Microsoft has released security update MS17-0101 that resolves the SMB version 1 vulnerability used by the WannaCry attack, however some customers are also disabling SMB version 1 completely in their network environment. This forces SMB clients to use later versions of the SMB protocol.

NOTE: Windows XP (or earlier) and Windows Server 2003 (and earlier) do not support SMB versions higher than SMB version 1. Customers running these operating systems should apply the security patches released from Microsoft to allow SMB version 1 availability.

The printers in each product category are listed by model number in a numerical order.

Printing device dependencies on SMB version 1only

Some printer features require the SMB protocol to function. These include:

- Send to Network Folder
- Send to SharePoint.
- Print servers may require the SMB protocol to share printer queues on the network.

Some HP printing devices do not support later versions of the SMB protocol. To continue to support these devices SMB version 1 must be available.

HP Printing devices supporting SMB version 1

The following print devices do not support SMB version 2. Disabling SMB version 1 support on servers and other networked scan destinations will cause features on these devices requiring the SMB protocol to malfunction.

NOTE: Microsoft has released security update MS17-0101 that resolves the SMB version 1 vulnerability used by the WannaCry attack. Microsoft has released security update MS17-0101 that resolves the SMB version 1 vulnerability used by the WannaCry attack.

HP Printing devices supporting SMB version 3

The following printing devices support SMB version 3 and are not dependent on SMB version 1. When establishing a SMBv3 connection with a SMBv3 capable server endpoint the data will be encrypted between the printer and the destination.

Some servers support being configured to only accept SMBv3 connections. SMBv1 and v2 connection requests will be dropped ensuring an encrypted connection.
